7 Reasons Viruses Don't Exist (self.conspiracyNOPOL)

How They Find Viruses

Please watch this 1 minute video if you want to get a better understanding and overview.

1. A virus has never been isolated

WHO states:

"Cell culture provides the optimum setting for the detection and identification of numerous pathogens of humans, which is achieved via virus isolation in the cell culture as the "gold standard" for virus discovery."

When virologists claim to isolate a "virus," they are referring to the end result of a cell culture experiment. This brew contains fragments of genetic material from many different sources, as well as various contaminants, pollutants, foreign materials, etc. The particles they label "viruses" have never actually been separated from the mixture they were in, and can therefore not be called isolation.

Virology subscribes to subtraction through addition. Or, in other words, the exact opposite of isolation.

Some researchers use the term "isolation" in their papers, but the procedures described therein do not represent a proper isolation (purification) process. Consequently, in this context the term "isolation" is misused.

Cell culture

2. Failure to adhere to the scientific method

<https://preview.redd.it/846zgf2mizaa1.png?width=1224&format=png&auto=webp&v=enabled&s=030fc89f0615c89d6e2b84ad39703929a6e34a38>

The lack of an isolated virus means that virology does not possess an independent variable; which is a requirement to pursue the scientific method.

PURPOSE

On r/conspiracyNOPOL, better known as NOPOL, we discuss all kinds of conspiracy theories, but try to avoid the red Vs blue WWE-style nonsense known as 'politics'.

BACKGROUND

NOPOL was created on 5-Feb-2020, when the entire front page of r/conspiracy was filled with politics-related threads. Genuine conspiratorial discussion was washed out by what appeared to be mostly astrourfing threads.

NOPOL is a refuge for conspiracy-minded thinkers who see all politicians as clowns in the same circus, led by the same ringmaster.

RULES

1. BE CIVIL AND POST IN GOOD FAITH

Just be nice to people. Even if you disagree, be polite to them, and they will be polite to you.

By remaining friendly and open to alternative perspectives, we give ourselves the best chance of undoing the myriad lies programmed into us from a young age by television, school, broader society, and even by conspiracy culture itself -- yes, there are liars on YouTube, too!

Good faith encourages discussion, bad faith derails and stifles it. Examples include insults, discussion sliding (including dropping links without explaining further), ad hominem and deliberate misrepresentation (gaslighting).

The unpurified fluids used during the culture is not a valid independent variable as the "virus" assumed to be within has never been shown to exist in a purified and isolated state before the experiment takes place.

The effect seen in the cell culture is not a valid dependent variable as it is not a naturally observed phenomena and it can be explained by various factors other than a "virus" [1, 2].

The cell culture method itself is not a valid experimental set-up as it was never designed through the adherence to the scientific method.

Some virology papers will refer to a "mock" infected culture which virologists claim is the "control" in the cell culture experiment. However, the details of these controls are conspicuous by their absence.

Such "controls" are not valid and can't be trusted, for example; in a pivotal "SARS-CoV-2" study, the antibiotics were doubled in the experimental culture (not the control) during the culture experiments to achieve an effect in only 1 out of 24 cultures (which should be considered an experimental margin of error). This information was left out of the published study. Source.

As seen in this example, the addition of more antibiotics to the experimental culture completely invalidates the results as the control was not treated the same.

Regardless, mock-infections are not proper controls as only the variable being studied (the "virus") should be eliminated.

3. The existence of viruses is based solely on flawed indirect evidence

<https://preview.redd.it/qm9a6edtizaa1.png?width=1024&format=png&auto=webp&v=enabled&s=5089394d7ed91b212ffb051ed78de2502712cec1>

As virologists can not provide the purified and isolated particles they believe are "viruses," they lack direct evidence as to the existence of said viruses.

The different sources of indirect evidence that stands in as a substitute for the invisible "virus" include: cell culture procedures, electron microscope images, antibody results, genomes, animal studies, etc.

The cell culture experiment creates the effect and then assumes a cause (virus), without ever verifying that the assumed cause exists in the first place. By doing so, virology is engaging in what is known as an affirming the consequent logical fallacy, expressed as such:

1. If there is a virus present, there will be a certain effect.
2. There is a certain effect; therefore, a virus is present.

This is also an example of begging the question and circular reasoning.

Virologists also try to use one fictional entity to prove another; antibodies. What virologists will not openly admit to is that antibodies are nonspecific and will regularly bind to proteins which are not the intended target. Antibodies sold to labs vary in quality and differ batch-to-batch which often leads to erroneous and false results. The work done with antibodies is unreproducible and irreplacable which has led to a reproducibility crisis in the sciences.

The reason for all of this is that "antibodies" remain an unproven theoretical construct.

4. The genome of a virus is only a theoretical construction

Because of the absence of a purified and isolated virus, virologists use a computer simulation to create the genome of a virus (this process is called alignment). In summary, they take genetic pieces from the cell culture and

(PDF) Good Faith / Bad Faith summary

2. POST ABOUT CONSPIRACIES

The main theme or topic of your post should be a conspiracy, which is defined as two or more people plotting in secret.

3. NO POL(ITICS)

We define 'politics' as red Vs blue cheerleading/muck-raking, or anything that can be interpreted as taking a side.

Some topics are more political than others, that's life. Objective discussion is fine if the mods agree you are not taking a side.

4. USE SUBMISSION STATEMENTS

Submission statements are a comment on a link post that begins with "Submission statement: " or "SS: " followed by a short description of the link; in short, please tell the reader why they should care.

As a rule of thumb, a good submission statement is (at least) one sentence per 10 minutes of reading/viewing time, i.e. a one-hour video requires at least six sentences of description.

Shorter descriptions may lead to post removal for low effort; if in doubt, add more detail.

5. NO MULTIPOSTS OR CROSSPOSTS

NOPOL is a place for exclusive content, and great discussions -- not spam.

Multiposting means spamming the same content to multiple subreddits. To avoid removals, always post here first and wait 48 hours before reposting elsewhere.

Crossposting is reddit's native way to create a new thread from an existing one. It can lead to brigading so we do not allow inbound or outbound crossposts. Some apps do not respect subreddit settings and allow crossposts anyway, these will be removed by mods.

6. NO SCREENSHOTS, SCREEN RECORDINGS, MEME POSTS

Please post this type of content on our sister sub, /r/ConspiracyMemesII.

Let readers check the original source for themselves by linking to it, where possible.

7. NO REDDIT DRAMA

If you wish to complain about this sub, its mods, another sub on reddit, or reddit itself, please do it in this sidebar post only. Post your comment there, then link to it, e.g. "My thoughts on this topic in the NOPOL drama thread".

Other drama posts or comments may be deleted.

8. AVOID DEATH TALK

NOPOL strongly discourages "tragedy" topics. They are difficult to corroborate and quickly steer or end discussions.

The topic of death itself is fine, as is all speculation. Assertions of real individuals or groups actually dead or suffering is not okay.

If you or someone you know suffers a loss, kindly keep it to yourself. Thank you.

Violators will be offered three choices 1) supply verifiable confirmatory evidence; 2) edit or delete the remark; or 3) take condolence leave then use a computer database to fill in the missing gaps. No control experiments are performed during the theoretical 'construction' of the genome.

In order to be able to theoretically/computationally assemble the very short sequences of genetic material (from unknown origin) into a long genome, virologists use a template to align these short sequences into a very long, supposedly viral genome strand.

Without such a predefined, very long sequence template, no virologist is able to theoretically/computationally create a viral genome strand.

Virologists argue that the theoretically/computationally constructed genome strand originates from a virus because the alignment was carried out by means of yet another, predefined viral genome strand. This logic is clearly and unambiguously refuted since all templates were themselves exclusively generated by theoretical/computation and do not originate from a virus.

What is also evident is that genomes themselves are entirely unreliable as virologists are unable to sequence the exact same genome every time. There are currently around 14.5 million variants of the same "virus" (SARS-CoV-2) running around.

5. The composition of the structures that virologists pass off as viruses have never been biochemically characterized Particles that they show in images claiming to be viruses have never been isolated and neither has their composition been biochemically determined.

These photographed structures claimed to be viruses have never been used as the source from which short pieces of genetic material are taken and from which virologists theoretically construct a genome, passed off as the alleged genetic strand of a virus.

When other sub-microscopic particles are isolated, such as phages, the complete, always identical, very long, identically composed genetic strand is always found and the result of the biochemical characterisation is documented.

However, the composition of the structures declared to be viruses has never been determined biochemically. All publications in which structures are passed off as viruses in the electron microscopy can be easily checked and verified.

6. Electron micrographs claiming to be viruses are known typical artifacts and cellular structures

Images of "viruses" are only typical structures of dying cell cultures or laboratory-produced vesicles.

Other researchers outside the field of virology refer to these same structures as either typical cellular components such as extracellular vesicles, villi, exosomes, or other particles that are of the size assumed to be viral (they are referred to as virus-like particles).

This provides more independent confirmation that the claims that viruses can be seen under the electron microscope are scientifically refuted.

These alleged particles have been labeled "exosomes."

7. Virologists' animal experiments disprove virus existence claims

Virologists conduct animal experiments to allegedly prove that the substances

(i.e. a ban).

they work with are viruses and can cause disease.

Every single publication in which such animal experiments have been carried out clearly shows that the way in which the animals are treated produces exactly the symptoms that are claimed to be the effect of the virus.

It is clear from every single one of these publications that no control experiments were carried out in which the animals were subjected to the same conditions with sterile material.

> 6. Electron micrographs claiming to be viruses are known typical artifacts and cellular structures

For any interested particular in this, I think it the weakest link in many endeavors to understand "viral" etiology - that many clinical researchers are so thrilled to hunt for exosomes (viruses) that they will deem someone as succumbing from a one "type" based on various inferential technology including erroneous interpretations of electron micrographs Goldsmith et al do a good job calling out other researchers (but still claim they are able to identify SARS-CoV2 via electron microscope.) Nonetheless this is a great introduction to how fallible many virological papers are (those that analyze case studies and tissue post mortem for example)

See this table for the papers picked by authors that show why they are incorrect:

I'm going to keep posting "thank you" messages, for you continuing to expose the Livery corporate pharma fraud on here.

It was around 5 years ago that the system began ramping up its slander and censorship of natural health advocates with an online presence, in the run up to its contagion hoax. They're still suppressing such through their algorithms - while promoting invalid click-bait bullshit in place.

Very interesting. A dilemma I have would be, what causes HIV, herpes, and Rabies? Logical answer would be bacteria, I suppose. But then why would they have not been isolated it that's the case?

And what difference would it make in terms of treatments and the way we handle infectious disease if virus didn't exist?

I had this idea that corona is a result of EMF exposure.

Its not really "his" idea.

Anyway, I'd start with skimming this book:

<https://www.ahava528.com/wp-content/uploads/2021/06/The-Invisible-Rainbow-A-History-of-Electricity-and-Life.pdf>

The book doesnt directly analyze COVID-19 due to the time published, but it does analyze other respiratory ailments that mainstream has designated to be caused solely by exosomes / viruses.

Although Im not entirely sure what your research has actually led you towards. Please expand on your thoughts surrounding the claim that novel EMF technology (as invented by humans) is not bioactive - and that it is impossible for the reaction of a global community of cells to produce a shared reaction (exosomes / viruses).

There are countless resources indicating this might be the case; and that since the invention of electricity and thus the engulfing of lifeforms with layered novel forms of pulsed information dense / patterned radiation, that this isn't just another regular experiment going on as biological life adjusts.

This is a distraction that was heavily promoted during the recent contagion hoax. It feeds into 5G/EMF controlled conspiracy "scene" fear pr0n, while leading away from the truth of petrochemical poisoning by Livery corporations.

As for codename C+COVID, it didn't exist. There was NOTHING.

Aside all the usual toxic ailments classified as people "with C0V1D", any additional respiratory issues were caused by dolts wearing masks. Such provide a perfect warm and wet environment to incubate and grow bacteria before being breathed back in; where the body should have expelled them through natural respiratory expulsion.

Strong disagree.

There was 'something'. I witnessed it daily as a radiologist reading chest CTs. I'm pretty much on board with the virus hoax idea, I find the refutation of viral existence to be very compelling. However, when people in this camp claim that nothing at all happened during the "covid pandemic", they are claiming a demonstrable falsehood. And this weakens an otherwise strong argument against viruses.

I make no claim about what was causing the lung abnormalities on CT, but I know the abnormality was distinctive and appeared with incredible frequency from 2020-2021.

I no longer see this abnormality in "covid positive" patients. Mainstream narrative would say the virus has mutated. Again, I make no claim to understand why things have changed.

HIV

HIV is a "virus," not a "disease." HIV stands for human immunodeficiency viruses.

herpes

What is involved in "herpes" is an accumulation of toxic materials that the body has elected to eliminate through lesions and sores involving the skin. Learn more here.

Rabies

You can learn more "rabies" here and here.

Quote:

"There is a very high degree of uncertainty in the correlation between animal bites and the subsequent appearance of rabies-even when the biting animal is certifiably rabid"

"With the vast range of conditions that mimic rabies and the lack of bite marks, it's safe to question the existence of a specific disease known as rabies. It would be logical to conclude that rabies is nothing but the same set of symptoms that has been given a different label numerous times."

[...]

"There are many other conditions that can cause the exact same symptoms as rabies in both animals and in humans. In animals, canine distemper, encephalitis, and poisoning are a few of the conditions which can mimic rabies. In humans, this includes polio, being drunk and/or intoxicated on certain drugs, having Guillain-Barré syndrome, and encephalitis derived from the toxic vaccine itself."

I also believe "rabies" could be associated with toxins that bacteria produce under anaerobic conditions, as in puncture wounds, such as tetanus.

Downvoted on such great sources, lol. No attempt to even post why...

To everyone here: There is a valid reason to have a skepticism here, certainly of specific 'viral' diseases - Ms. and Mr. Bailey do a pretty good job outlining why for the anon that is uninitiated in the art of consuming research papers themselves. And perhaps even skepticism of the Concept of Virus (1957) itself, as a whole - but one can feel free to bench that until later if ever.. Note, the author of that paper (Lwoff) won a nobel prize for research into proposed "viral" mechanisms as they relate to bacteria.

A tip though, we are all capable to do so (review source papers), although it does take tremendous effort and interest throughout.

I had this idea that corona is a result of EMF exposure.

Yes that combined with toxic spike proteins inserted into some flu vaccines in the fall of 2019 to make it mostly kill off old people, the vaccines have always been the "virus". They cranked up the 5G signals in certain dense urban areas to create the desired effect.

toxic spike proteins

If unicorns (aka viruses) aren't real why believe in the horn of a unicorn (aka spike protein)?

The particles claimed to be spike proteins are a creation stemming from the cell culture process used to "isolate" the "viruses" as well as the preparations done in order to obtain the images by way of electron microscopy.

They literally patented that thing before the pandemic, it's not contagious but it can be created and injected into someone and do god knows what inside their body

permalink embed save parent report reply

[\[-\]](#) The_Noble_Lie 4 points 1 day ago

Note: just because a patent exist doesnt mean the thing is real in substance. This much is definitely true.

As for what is patented, its some permutation of a genetic sequence, that is claimed to be utilized by organic cells to produce a distinct protein. None of this is directly visible - there is a whole host of technology that is implemented to infer characteristics of proteins (some of which is destructive or interfering) - and these proteins analyzed in bulk; never has a singular protein been intercepted and identified after a singular mRNA sequence enters a cell for proposed transcription.

The concept of Spike Protein as it relates to specific viruses should be under contention to an unbiased individual.

Vaccines have harmed since they've existed, based upon the fact that the body will become disrupted by, and react to, foreign invasions. If inorganic, the body will not know how to deal with it, yet still keep attempting to purge it which, itself, will manifest as seemingly unrelated conditions. Tumors being one. There is no reason for any pharma to exist, other than to mask corporate commercial poisoning and steer belief and resources into this related Livery industry. Corporations exist to exist, by any and all means necessary.

Maybe slightly off-topic, but my own theory is "Covid" (which is obviously a non-existent "virus") is a cover-up to hide the fact that this matrix reality is dying and the people connected to it via a hivemind (aka "NPCs") are the only ones affected by this. I believe the same applies to the quaxxine, the quaxx was probably rolled out to be used as a cover-up to why the "NPCs" are, allegedly, 'dying suddenly'. I've been quaxxinated numerous times and I've never had an adverse reaction ever, not even with the swine flu quaxx which I took (not my proudest normie moment back in 2009...). I think the movie Divergent (2014) goes into this theory to some extent.

The truth hurts... literally, at least for those a part of the matrix reality's hivemind. Which is why I support your posts OP! We are not powerless.

I would get a cold sore after eating spicy foods or nuts. Taking certain vitamins like lysine, colloidal silver, BHT, and monolaurin seemed to make me immune to breakouts.

I also have tics, like Tourette's syndrome. Probably milder compared to really bad ones out there. It's antiviral responsive.

So I'm wondering how these can be explained in regards to the theory that virus doesn't exist.

It's a very interesting theory, but in terms of mainstream support, it's flat earth at best. I do like flat earth theory, as it has a lot of compelling thoughts. But there are overwhelming proof going against it. So I stay open minded but very skeptical.
